- UNDISTINGUISHABLE, adj.
 1. Not to be distinctly seen.
 These things seem small and undistinguishable,
 Like far off mountains turned into clouds. Shakespeare.
 The quaint mazes in the wanton green,
 For lack of tread, are undistinguishable. Shakespeare.
 Its lineaments are destroy'd, and the materials mixt in an undistinguishable confusion. Rogers.
 2. Not to be known by any peculiar property.
 No idea can be undistinguishable from another, from which it ought to be different. Locke.
UNDISTINGUISHED, adj.
 1. Not marked out by objects or intervals.
 'Tis longer since the creation of angels than of the world, by seven hundred years: whereby we would mark out so much of that undistinguish'd duration, as we suppose would have admitted seven hundred annual revolutions of the sun. Locke.
 2. Not seen, or not to be seen otherwise than confusedly; not separately and plainly discerned.
 'Tis like the milky way, all over bright;
 But frown so thick with stars, 'tis undistinguish'd light. Dryden.

 1. Free from perturbation; calm; tranquil.
 To our high-raised phantasy present
 That undisturbed song of pure content. Milton.
 The peaceful cities of th' Ausonian shore,
 Lull'd in their ease, and undisturb'd before,
 Are all on fire. Dryden.
 A state, where our imitation of God shall end in the undisturbed fruition of him to all eternity. Atterbury.
 To be undisturbed in danger, sedately to consider what is fittest to be done, and to execute it steadily, is a complex idea of an action, which may exist. But to be undisturbed in danger, without using one's reason, is as real an idea as the other. Locke.
 2. Not interrupted by any hindrance or molestation.
 Nature flints our appetite,
 And craves no more than undisturb'd delight;
 Which minds, unmix'd with cares and fears, obtain;
 A soul serene, a body void of pain. Dryden.
 Unvex'd with quarrels, undisturb'd with noise,
 The country king his peaceful realm enjoys. Dryden.
 The English, undisturb'd, submit obey. Philips.
 3. Not agitated.
 A good conscience is a port which is land-locked on every side, where no winds can possibly invade. There a man may not only see his own image, but that of his maker, clearly reflected from the undisturb'd and silent waters. Dryden.
UNDISTURBEDLY, adv. Calmly; peacefully.
 Our minds are so weak, that they have need of all the assistance can be procured, to lay before them undisturbedly
 the thread and coherence of any discourse. Locke.
UNDIVIDABLE, adj. Not separable; not susceptible of division.
 The best actors in the world for tragedy, pastoral, feene undividable, or poem unlimited. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

UND

- How comes it, husband,

 We implore thy powerful hand,
 To undo the charmed band
 Of true virgin here distress'd. Milton.
 Were men so dull, they could not see
 That Lyce painted, should they see,
 Like simple birds, into a net,
 So grossly woven and ill-set;
 Her own teeth would undo the knot,
 And let all go that she had got. Waller.
 3. To change any thing done to its former state; to recall, or annul any action.
 They may know, that we are far from presuming to think that men can better any thing which God hath done, even as we are from thinking, that men should presume to undo some things of men, which God doth know they cannot better. Hobbes.
 It was a torment
 To lay upon the dam'd, which Sycorax
 Could not again undo. Shakespeare's Tempest.
 We seem ambitious God's whole work undo;
 Of nothing he made us, and we strive too,
 To bring ourselves to nothing back. Donne.
